

MPhil IN EARLY MODERN HISTORY

<https://www.tcd.ie/history/postgraduate/taught/early-modern/>

Course Overview

The M.Phil. in Early Modern History introduces well-qualified graduates to research in the political, social, cultural and religious history of the period from the Reformation to the French Revolution. Across a range of taught modules dealing with this transformative period in Irish, European and global history, the programme provides students with a critical awareness of different types of history and different approaches to research along with an opportunity to develop their own research skills in one of Europe's great research libraries.

Key Features

- The M.Phil. in Early Modern History is an opportunity to:
- Study in Ireland's highest-ranking History department in the EU's most international university.
- Encounter the early modern world in all its diversity.
- Work with internationally renowned historians in graduate seminar classes and one-to-one research supervisions.
- Interrogate innovative approaches to research, engage in important debates and explore exciting challenges.
- Undertake your own research on a subject of your choosing in one of the world's great research libraries.

Preferred Applicant Experience

The M.Phil. is open to well-qualified graduates in History and related disciplines in the Humanities and Social Sciences.

Career Opportunities

While many M.Phil. students go on to study for PhD degrees in History, both in Trinity College Dublin and in universities around the world, the M.Phil. also provides students with many of the skills needed if they are thinking of a career in the public or private sector.

Course Places	15
Course Structure	Full Time 1 Year Part Time 2 Years
Contact	Course Director Dr Joseph Clarke clarkej1@tcd.ie